

Inclusivity in the Workplace

Autism Canada's Workplace Inclusivity Training offers insights into the ways neurodivergents might navigate workplace scenarios. Embracing inclusiveness not only diminishes toxicity within the work environment but also fosters connections among people, bridging differences in cultures, personalities, and diversities.

Why take this training?

With a prevalence of 1 in 50 people in Canada being diagnosed on the Autism Spectrum, it becomes crucial for a wider audience to comprehend autism, particularly those who frequently engage with individuals on the spectrum.

This one-hour training session is dedicated to providing guidance on fostering positive interactions with individuals on the spectrum and contributing to the creation of a safe, inclusive environment for the autistic community.

Let us teach you:

- About Autism
- Work-life balance and the workplace routine
- Productive and effective communication
- About differences in social and communication skills
- Sensory processing and sensory breaks
- Masking
- Navigating difficult conversations
